

Internet Use Policies: California State University, Fresno supports academic freedom and the free exchange of ideas, in conformity with federal and state law. The content of personal home pages on the Internet is solely the responsibility of the authors and does not necessarily reflect policies or opinions of the university. It is unlawful to affix the university seal to any material without prior approval from the university.

University Student Union Internet Services Policy

The USU provides public computer workstations for the identification and use of other information resources by Fresno State students, faculty, staff in support of the research, teaching and education mission of the University. The USU does not control, filter or verify information available on the internet and is not responsible for its content.

At time of high demand, persons may be asked to relinquish a workstation for priority uses or users, and time limits may be enforced. Priority use of USU public workstations is given to those engaged in research or course-related activities and to University users.

Individuals are expected to use public workstations responsibly and in compliance with state and federal law and University and USU policies. Users must not infringe on the rights or privacy of others or the integrity of the computer system. The USU may deny access to those violating this policy and violators may be subject to appropriate disciplinary or legal action.

The following are examples of unacceptable use:

- Downloading or installing files or software to hard drives.
- Deliberately altering any files or modifying the configuration of any USU workstation or peripheral.
- Violating USU computer security or network integrity, including attempts to bypass network security, obtain passwords, share passwords with others, or the unauthorized use of passwords.
- Destroying or damaging computer equipment or removing any part of USU computer workstations.
- Connecting personal computers, laptops, or other devices to the USU network except via the wireless network provided for such use.
- Viewing content that may be offensive to others
